

Coyote in Phone Booth

Southwest Wildlife recently rescued a coyote who had found his way into the very posh lobby of an office in the Doubletree Ranch area of Scottsdale. According to the volunteer who rescued him, it appeared that he was preparing to summon his own assistance just as she arrived.

There he was, sitting up on a shelf in a phone booth, right next to the telephone! He certainly recognized that he was in a tight situation. Perhaps he was about to dial 911?

He was trapped and subsequently released into an area much better suited—and much safer—for coyotes.