

Abandoned Javelina Orphan

This little javelina had a rough start in life. Two little reds were left abandoned in a cardboard box in front of the World Wildlife Zoo—under the blazing June sun. When they were found, they were overheated, dehydrated, and near death. The veterinarian at the zoo took them in and, after a night at her home in intensive care, they were transported to Southwest. Unfortunately, the weakest one did not survive. This frisky little fella, however, is finally feeling fine and will soon be introduced to others his size.